Southern Nevada State Veterans Home
COVID-19 Testing of Team Members Complete

(Boulder City, NV) - COVID-19 testing of team members at the Southern Nevada State Veterans Home (SNSVH) is now complete. The results of the 234 tested by the Nevada Department of Veterans Services (NDVS) shows 226 negative and eight positives for the coronavirus.

Of the positives, these team members were either already at home or immediately told to self-isolate for 14 days.

SNSVH is not allowing anyone who has not been tested to work at the home or be allowed inside the building. There is one outstanding test result of a team member who is currently not working at the home. That test result is expected from the lab late today or tomorrow.

As for residents, this health situation has stabilized. There is no change in the number of cases. The five positive residents remain isolated and continue to improve.

"We are extremely grateful we were able to get COVID-19 testing for all our residents and team members at the home," said NDVS Director Kat Miller adding, "This has really helped to ease the fears and concerns of our residents, staff and families. But we realize we have to remain vigilant in order to get on top of this virus and stay on top of it."
